

Trauma informed practice: making positive change for people and systems

While there has been a welcome increase in attention to the experience of violence, abuse and neglect, our field has yet to widely adopt trauma informed practice as a holistic and supportive way of responding to the high rates of harm experienced by people with intellectual disability.

In this seminar, we will discuss research frameworks which underpin principles of trauma informed practice, and how they can support people with intellectual disability to resolve trauma, improve their wellbeing, and strengthen organisational quality.

Alongside this, we will present some useful practice examples which show how principles of trauma informed practice can make a difference to everyday practice in supporting people with intellectual disability.
