

NZ division webinar

The importance of trauma informed approaches

This webinar is relevant to anyone who supports or cares for a person with a learning (intellectual) disability and wants to ensure the holistic wellbeing of the person and prevent trauma. It is also relevant for people with a learning (intellectual) disability themselves so they can advocate for their own wellbeing.

Speaker: Frian Wadia MNZM

Frian is a parent of three children with learning and sensory disabilities and is a passionate advocate for inclusion and equity for children with a disability in Aotearoa New Zealand. She has navigated the challenges across the education, health and disability systems using a rights based approach and believes that better understanding of neuroscience and trauma informed approaches can support greater inclusion and well being for people with a disability and communities.

Thursday, 24 October 2024

3pm - 4pm NZST

1pm - 2pm AEDT

Cost:

Free (members)

$25 (non-members)

Please contact the ASID Office if you have any questions at secretariat@asid.asn.au

Visit asid.asn.au to register